Succession planning options

BVI companies offer three primary mechanisms for organising succession of company shares. Redomiciled can advise on the most suitable approach depending on your objectives, estate planning requirements, and jurisdiction of residence.

Joint Tenancy

Shares are held jointly as a single legal interest. On the death of one joint tenant, shares automatically pass to the survivor — no BVI probate required, and foreign forced-heirship rules do not apply. No additional government fees.

BVI Will

A BVI-law will directs how shares pass on death. A Grant of Probate in the BVI is still required, involving court time and costs. Typically USD 2,000 plus disbursements of 6%, excluding future probate costs.

Trust Structure

Shares are transferred to a trustee who holds and manages them for named beneficiaries. Different trust types available (revocable/irrevocable, discretionary/fixed). Most suitable structure depends on required control, protection and duration.

Advisory note: The most appropriate succession mechanism depends on your individual circumstances, estate planning objectives, and jurisdiction of tax residency. Redomiciled can coordinate with specialist BVI counsel to advise on the right approach. Succession advisory fees are quoted individually following a scoping call.
